SOME IMPORTANT FOUNDING MEMBERS

HANNAH, CALVIN RICHARDS (1872-1940). Calvin R. Hannah, born on May 2, 1872, in Chrisman, Illinois. He was one of the youngest children in a large farming family. He attended Chrisman High School, De Paul University, and the University of Illinois, and graduated on July 5, 1904, from the Illinois College of Medicine. That year Hannah went to Mexico to serve as an intern at the American Hospital; he was later assistant surgeon of the Mexican Central Railroad at Aguascalientes. In 1905 he moved to Dallas, Texas, where he set up a private practice and became assistant city health officer. In 1907 Hannah began a long association with Baylor Hospital when he became its obstetrician in chief. The following year he became a member of the advisory board of the hospital and a professor of obstetrics at Baylor University College of Medicine (now Baylor College of Medicine). He also served as chief of staff and a member of the advisory board for Parkland Hospital from 1918 to 1920 and again from 1922 to 1935. Throughout his career he maintained a private practice, for a time in partnership with Warren E. Massey. During the decade preceding his death, Hannah's office was in the Medical Arts Building at the corner of Pacific and St. Paul streets.

He was elected president of the Dallas County Medical Society in 1914. He was the organizer and first president of the Texas Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists in 1930 and was appointed that year by President Hoover to the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. Hannah served as chairman in 1935-36 of the Commission on Maternal and Child Health in Texas and was a charter member and vice president in 1936-37 of the American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists, and Abdominal Surgeons. He was a member of the Texas Medical Association and served as its president elect in 1936-37 and as president in 1937-38. Other professional organizations to which Hannah belonged included the American Medical Association, the Dallas Southern Clinical Society, the American College of Surgeons, and the Theta Kappa Psi medical fraternity. Hannah published over two dozen papers in local and national medical journals. They deal with the problems of childbirth, recommendations for prenatal and postnatal care, and the broader issues of medical ethics and education. As an obstetrician and gynecologist, he was chiefly concerned that the medical profession was focusing too heavily on surgical solutions rather than basic nutrition and prophylaxis. A colleague asserted that "his greatest usefulness in the field of gynecology was in preventing needless operations." Medicine, as Hannah saw it, was a team effort. He believed that if doctors joined to promote better education, both of the public and of medical students, the rewards would be material as well as moral. He saw socialized medicine as a threat to the profession and argued that physicians must address the broader needs of public health lest the government step in. Peer pressure, he believed, should be used to get recent medical graduates to set up practice in rural areas and to get small communities to build hospitals and share the use of expensive equipment. December 16, 1940, he suffered a heart attack and died at Baylor Hospital.

MAFFETT, MINNIE LEE (1882-1964). Minnie Lee Maffett, physician and surgeon, was born in Falls County, Texas, on September 9, 1882. After attending public schools in Falls County, she graduated in 1902 from Sam Houston State Teachers College (now Sam Houston State University). While working on this degree she taught in public schools, and in 1906 she became principal of a ward school in Cleburne. From 1907 to 1910 she served as principal at the State Orphan Home High School in Corsicana. Maffett graduated from the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston in 1914. After an internship at the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, she established a practice as an abdominal surgeon in Dallas in 1915. She opened the health center at Southern Methodist University in 1915 and oversaw its growth to recognition by the American Medical Association; she resigned as its director in 1949. From 1926 to 1943 she served as associate professor of gynecology and obstetrics at Baylor University College of Medicine in Dallas. When the Baylor facility moved to Houston in 1943, Dr. Maffett became professor of clinical gynecology at the Southwestern Medical Foundation in Dallas (now UT/Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas). She later was a consultant in gynecology at Southwestern. She served on the staffs of several Dallas-area hospitals, including Baylor, Parkland, and Medical Arts. She completed postgraduate work at the University of Chicago, additional training in urology at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, and studies at the New York Post Graduate Hospital.

Maffett served in 1919-20 as the first president of the Texas Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and later (1939-44) became president of its national affiliate. Through the federation a fellowship named for Maffett was established in the 1950s to award grants to women for study in medical science. Other groups in which she was active included the American Medical Association, Southern Medical Association, Texas Medical Association, Texas Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, American Medical Women's Association, American College of Surgeons, and Dallas County Medical Society. Maffett also was a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, a professional organization for women teachers, and the University Women's Club of Southern Methodist University. During the war and afterwards, she was extremely active as an advisor to China relief agencies, and in setting up nursing schools in China and Taiwan. While returning from a trip to establish a nursing school in her name in Taiwan she became ill and died in Honolulu, Hawaii, on May 26, 1964.

J. L. JINKINS, SR. a native of Normangee. He received his doctorate of medicine in 1916 at UTMB and practiced for over 60 years. Was Clinical Associate Professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Medical Branch. His memberships included the Central Association of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Fellow of the American College of Surgeons and the American Society for the Study of Sterility. In 1936 he organized a Sterility Clinic for the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology which he equipped at his own expense. Historically, it is revealed that this clinic was the second such to be founded in the United States
